

Frederica Farms

Frederica Farms offers a community garden for our residents.

Life in the South is centered around great cuisine and community. Frederica Farms brings these together with a working community garden. Offering a site for owners to bring home freshly grown produce, wildflowers and even local honey from the over 40,000 honeybees cultivated right on site.

St. Simons Island's rich history of farming and our resident's commitment to existing in harmony with nature motivated several owners to take on the project to create the Frederica Farms. An abundant array of locally grown fruits and vegetables are always available. An irrigation system keeps crops well-watered in the Lowcountry summer heat. Of course a garden isn't complete without a shed to store tools and a fence to keep the deer from snacking on the crops.

Harvest dinner with fellow owners enjoying the fruits of their labor.

In just a few short months, our garden has produced squash, cucumbers, tomatoes, lettuce, green beans, eggplant, peppers, figs, blackberries, blueberries, watermelon, spices and even kumquats. Sweet corn is ready and makes a wonderful summer treat for the table. Our owners are enjoying Wednesday Wine and Weed where they get together to weed and harvest along with camaraderie and great wine. Follow along on Facebook @fredericafarms.

The hum of bees is the voice of the garden - Emily Dickinson

Our resident Beekeeper Susan Shipman shares her knowledge of the secret life of bees. Frederica Farms is home to over 40,000 honeybees. Weekly maintenance of the hive keeps the nest healthy and gives residents an opportunity to learn about the complex structure of a hive. Locally honey is harvested and offered for sale. Fun fact- A hive of bees must fly 55,000 miles to produce a pound of honey.
